

What YOU are saying about Interview with Gods

Fantastic book! ...it brings a surprising and innovative way of show[ing] our connection to our planet and all life forms.

I enjoyed your book so much; it is very convincing and does not sound like fiction. ...you are an intrepid explorer in a jungle of thorns. Grateful for the message of good news.

Interview with Gods is a warning book about the increasing degradation of our planet... It draws attention to the need of awareness about the primary objective of man's evolution, in [opposition] to the diversion of the political and social values... The book is an engaging read, gripping the reader from the first pages. It brings to us an awakening of our curiosity for the mysterious worlds that surround us.

I loved the book because it shows us through a simple and intriguing story some new possibilities, which lead us to questions and diverse ways of thinking according to the perception and life of each one. It's an invitation to a journey beyond what we know and think. A door to the universe, to the unimaginable that dwells within us all... A great story in a small book that can transform your way of seeing life, the world, the others and oneself.

*Dear Brother, thank you for your book Interview with Gods which I have had the rare privilege of reading... There is so much food for thought in this edition and I am to do further analysis of the contents...
My warmest regards to you*

Chapter Eight—Third Interview: Development

The third day had come. From an anomaly that was crossing the Internet through computers all over the globe, here they were, facing real contact with something bigger, smarter, and unexplainable. These days would be remembered for a long time. E.C. promptly began writing the third theme:

E.C.: Friends of One Planet, let's start our third interview. Today we will talk about development, a term used by your civilization to connote a change of state—a physical or behavioral change. I say development is the inevitable path that all life forms experience in fulfilling the most striking feature of the architecture which shapes the living universe: transformation.

All energy existing in every being, shaping his contours, giving him existence, and allowing the acting of his consciousness is in the process of development, growing or declining. In your human vision, creation and destruction are the extremes that limit this process.

What was there before creation and what is going to happen after the destruction is the great mystery that populates your collective unconscious. But as I said, the Life's project is perfect, and the living elements aren't loose parts that appear randomly to grow and change until they reach a breaking point.

Let's go back to the example of the orange. Through its seed, when it touches the ground and activates the primordial energy following the genetic code or the design made for this being, it will begin a development journey that will culminate with the plant reaching its peak, when it will be able to fruit and generate new seeds with the same structure of the seed that had generated it. It will produce an abundance of fruit, until one day, when its roots will become weak and its whole body won't be able to circulate the sap of life. Then its structure will be gradually destroyed, and all elements will return to their homes, until a new seed can activate them again. In the example of the orange, if we changed a few words, it could become the example of an animal, a man, a planet, and so on. Is it hard to understand? The development is an inherent condition of all beings. It's the great engine that allows the movement and specialization of primordial energy.

Please consider all that was said above as the structural aspect of development which is present in everything.

Now, let's examine another no less important aspect: the mental development of all beings. As all created structures that follow an architectural pattern during their existence, the temporary consciousnesses which manifest themselves using these structures also follow a transformation process.

Take the example of a man who has a body and a temporary consciousness, which will characterize him with a personal identity during the period of his existence. This temporary identity enables the man to mentally recognize himself as a unique being, and through the resources provided by his body he can interact with the environment. This temporary consciousness emerged, as we have seen, from another consciousness, the planetary consciousness. This relationship must be well understood. This isn't a process in which the planetary consciousness simply subdivides itself to create other consciousnesses, which returns to its source after its time of existence. It's a more complex and wonderful process. The planetary consciousness, which is also temporary, while manifesting itself as a single entity in a higher dimension, projects itself to form temporary consciousnesses in a lower dimension. I'm using the higher and lower terms to make your understanding easier. I have no intention of classifying different dimensions.

In the lower dimension, the mental structure of consciousness is presented as a reflection of its original nature. It is subdivided and, therefore, gives the false impression that each of these parts operates completely independently. Actually, everything is happening at the same moment: the actions and the behavior of each sub-consciousness living in a lower dimension directly affects the behavior of the source consciousness.

Because they are mentally connected, all the elements of Life are in tune with one another, and depending on the development level of each part in this great network, it can be used for many marvelous functions. In the example of cardiac cells discussed in the previous interview, the cardiac consciousness maintains its structure and the body functions through its cellular projection, where each cell operates independently to maintain its genetic characteristics allowing the formation of the heart body. It's the same process that allows every man to be a mental reflection of his higher consciousness and simultaneously project himself inward, creating the sub-consciousnesses that make up his mind and body. So, it's possible for a Biomatrix to be connected to all other Biomatrices of Life, as well as to other elements. To the extent that each element moves towards its development, the necessary information to trigger this process comes to any element by flowing through the Life's consciousness, which has designed everything that is contained therein, reaching all the elements and granting them access to all necessary information. A man, depending on his mental level, can access knowledge that has already been invented by other similar beings in different Biomatrices. It's a road whereby all knowledge is transmitted to those able to perceive and comprehend it.

Let's now consider specifically the development of your civilization. From our dimension of existence, we are following the cycle of transformations of your Biomatrix using the technologies that we developed.

The emergence of the human species on a planet occurs naturally, because man is an extension of the planet. Actually, he is the planet itself, created and specialized to operate on its body. So, the human's emergence takes place at specific locations, from the specialization of primordial energy that acts on the new genetic code of the species. Human life emerges on a scheduled manner at these sites, which provide the initial geological and climatic conditions necessary for their survival. It's a gradual process of physical and mental development. Their emergence occurs spontaneously following the normal cycle, from the moment when the biological clock of the Biomatrix is activated. All resources of the Life and the solar cell will be used to provide the necessary support. Some mental signals are sent from other Biomatrices already developed, through their interconnected network of temporary consciousnesses, transmitting the necessary codes for implementing this new type of sub-element. At this point, the Biomatrix has already developed life forms capable of acting as hosts for this new genetic code that will create human beings. So, over the surface of its body will begin the journey of one of its most special resources, man, who will bring in his genetic code the freedom to observe, analyze, and understand everything around him, through a long journey that will culminate in his voluntary reintegration with the Biomatrix or with himself.

As I said before, it isn't my intention with this work to interfere in the development of your civilization. I'm here in response to the mental call of the planetary consciousness to provide information in order to facilitate the human understanding about themselves and the universe in which they're inserted. This knowledge will be perceived differently in each temporary consciousness according to its mental level. It will be important for its vision and comprehension about this living universe, which surrounds you everywhere.

About the Author

I'm a person who enjoys the simple things of life. I like to spend my free time with family and friends. I love hiking, cycling, reading, and looking at the night sky to admire the stars. Whenever I'm close to nature I feel myself really at home.

Professionally, I graduated in computer science, and I have been working the last 23 years as systems analyst, projecting and developing IT solutions. I have worked on projects in different business areas such as trade, finance, building, military, insurance, telecom, energy, off-shore, oil, etc. Technically, I'm experienced in Database Modeling, Online Transaction Processing (OLTP), Online Analytical Processing (OLAP), Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP), Customer Relationship Management (CRM), Business Intelligence (BI), and Data Mining, among others.

Personally, since very early, I realized the curiosity in observing and understanding the universe was something that really made my eyes shine. That quest threw me on a journey of knowledge that led me to immerse myself in reading about different expressions of human's behavior and knowledge, such as arts, religions, spiritualism, esoteric, philosophy, theosophy, archeology, physics, chemistry, biology, anatomy, astronomy, technology, etc. This journey is something that turned into my life goal—something that has no end—and I'll carry with me throughout my life.

Now, I'm starting on a new challenge of sharing with everyone, through writing, some of my own visions, which I present in the form of fiction. My goal is to create a link between all these themes, aiming to enable the readers to acquire a more natural concept about humanity, life, Earth, and universe, and how all these things relate to each other. I strongly believe that through knowledge sharing we can create a society mentally and ecologically sustainable.
